Position Opening Announcement

We, the Graduate School of International Development (GSID) of Nagoya University, Japan, are pleased to announce the opening of the following position. Nagoya University is one of the oldest and best national universities in Japan. GSID was established in 1991 as the first graduate school in Japan specializing in international development, to promote research in the fields of international development, international cooperation studies, and international communication, and to train future development professionals. It offers an interdisciplinary international development and cooperation course, which consists of six thematic programs, including the program in education and human resources development. As international students comprise more than a half of the student body, we highly value the cultural diversity among faculty members and students in GSID (GSID website: http://www.gsid.nagoya-u.ac.jp):

1. Position title: associate professor
2. Number of position: one
3. Teaching subjects:
   (Graduate-level): “Educational Development and Cooperation” (1st semester), “Educational Development Planning and Evaluation” (2nd semester), and “Seminar on Education and Human Resource Development” (year-round)
   (Undergraduate level): “International Development Studies” or “Basic Seminar” (a total of two semesters to be taught in 3 years)
4. Qualifications: Applicants are required to:
   1) hold a Ph.D. in educational development, social development or related fields;
   2) be able to teach graduate-level courses and supervise theses/dissertations of master’s and doctoral students in English;
   3) have teaching experience in educational development or related fields at the university level;
   4) have relevant research and practical experience in educational development or related fields in developing countries;
   5) demonstrate a good command in Japanese sufficient to handle administrative matters in Japanese (for non-Japanese applicants). (There is no nationality restriction.)
   6) be eager to be in charge of teaching subjects such as Overseas Fieldwork and Domestic Fieldwork
5. Documents to be submitted for application:
   1) curriculum vitae (with a passport-size photo attached; e-mail addresses should be included);
2) a list of publication;
3) copies of up to 5 main works (books/articles) (5 copies each; photocopies are acceptable);
4) a short essay in Japanese or English on your research interests and future research plan in the field of educational development (2,000 to 4,000 words);
5) a short essay in Japanese or English on your education/supervisory activities at GSID;
6) a proposed syllabus of teaching subject “Educational Development and Cooperation”

(Please note that we are unable to return your application documents after submission.)

6. Application deadline: May 8, 2017 (All the application documents MUST arrive by this date.)

7. Expected starting date: October 1, 2017 (negotiable)

8. Selection procedure:
   1) Short-listing through application documents;
   2) Interview and a short demonstration lecture (in late May)

(Please note that GSID will not bear the travel costs for interviews.)

9. Application documents should be sent, by registered mail, to:
   Prof. Sanae Ito,
   Dean
   Graduate School of International Development
   Nagoya University
   Furo-cho, Chikusa-ku, Nagoya 464-8601, Japan

10. For further information and inquiries, please contact:
    Prof. Aya Okada
    Chair, Selection Committee
    Graduate School of International Development
    Nagoya University
    e-mail: aokada@gsid.nagoya-u.ac.jp

We would greatly appreciate it if you could circulate this information widely to the relevant individuals in your institution.